David ... Appreciate your willingness to take another stab at some of this. But, if possible, I would like to get the perspective of your engineer and attorney and I have a little more time. So let's reschedule. I'll check back with you toward the end of the month.

Thank you,

Jim

Hi Jim,

From my notes, the outstanding questions you had were 1) about cyclic steaming – how they came to our attention, what discussion did EPA and DOGGR have about them, etc., 2) whether the primacy agreement approved in 1983 has ever been modified, and 3) regarding injection above fracture pressure, whether there is clear regulatory language allowing such injection in Class II wells. I have not made progress on #1 and will need to discuss this with my engineer who remains on medical leave. For #2, the answer appears to be that we have not modified the primacy agreement since initial approval. For item #3, there is regulatory language that pertains to Class II wells and injection pressure, but it may be more useful to include our attorney in that discussion if that is not a problem. Let me know. David

Hi Jim,

You can call my number. I thought I would at least have one of our attorneys join in, but she is now traveling back east so it will just be me on the line.

Talk to you tomorrow.

David

David ... Tuesday works. I will call you unless you'd like to get your people together on a conference line and initiate it from your end. It would also be helpful if I could get the names of those who will be joining us. Look forward to talking to you next week.

Thank you,

Jim

Hi Jim,

I'm sorry to not get back with you sooner. If it fits your schedule, perhaps we can schedule a call sometime next week. I will probably bring some others into the conversation. Unfortunately, my staff engineer who would be most useful in discussing cyclic steam well issues and communications with DOGGR about this type of well is still out on extended family leave. Not knowing when he will return to the office, I think it makes sense for us to continue the dialogue and cover as much territory as we can.

Regards,

David
